Southern California

Public Wikipedia excerpt supplied by SQuAD2.0; native paragraph 0.

Southern California, often abbreviated SoCal, is a geographic and cultural region that generally comprises California's southernmost 10 counties. The region is traditionally described as "eight counties", based on demographics and economic ties: Imperial, Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, and Ventura. The more extensive 10-county definition, including Kern and San Luis Obispo counties, is also used based on historical political divisions. Southern California is a major economic center for the state of California and the United States.

Source: rajpurkar.github.io/SQuAD-explorer/dataset/dev-v2.0.json. Text faithfully converted for the unchanged PDF pipeline; no new policy or facts authored.