Supplier invoice controls - operating guide

CURRENT 2026; effective 1 August 2026

Scope: Accounts payable matching and settlement. This is fictional Meridian Works guidance. The following responsibilities apply only to the named activity, not to other procedures with similar labels.

Accounts Payable withholds settlement of a goods invoice until the receiving team confirms receipt.

FIN-682 identifies an invoice quantity exceeding received quantity; FIN-628 identifies an unverified bank-account change.

The coordinator records what actually happened, identifies the responsible owner and checks the applicable route. A similarly numbered form is not interchangeable with the recorded form. For a rejected submission, retain the original request and obtain corrected evidence rather than creating a replacement event.

Registry FIN-783: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FIN-794: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FIN-805: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FIN-816: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Eligibility and operational limits. Select the named cohort and activity before applying a period or amount; different entitlements in this section are not substitutes.

Domestic goods invoices use Net 28, whereas international service invoices use Net 45.

A price variance of up to USD 9 can be cleared without a supervisor when all quantity checks pass.

A valid request contains its underlying event date and the scope used for the calculation. Reviewers distinguish acknowledgement, completion and storage periods. A deadline for submitting evidence is not a service restoration promise. If the activity or group is not stated, escalate the question rather than borrowing a nearby rule.

Registry FIN-827: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FIN-838: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FIN-849: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FIN-860: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Supplier invoice controls - operating guide

CURRENT 2026; effective 1 August 2026

Document control: this 2026 operating guide is CURRENT and effective from 1 August 2026. The 2024 edition is archived and superseded. No forecast for a later year is stated.

The payable controls effective in 2026 assign domestic goods settlement to Net 28.

Invoice matching, payment terms and currency conversion are separate decisions; conversion is a treasury responsibility.

The reference annex has its own scope. Staff should distinguish operational permission from commercial price, evidence retention and service specifications. Publication of a code or a process owner does not create a missing technical limit or a financial guarantee.

Amendment log: this edition consolidates the current timing rule and ownership path. Historical examples remain in the archive for traceability. They are not exceptions to the current rule. A request citing an older edition must be checked against the effective document before execution.
