Family leave case management - operating guide

CURRENT 2026; effective 1 August 2026

Scope: People advisers and separate parental case routes. This is fictional Meridian Works guidance. The following responsibilities apply only to the named activity, not to other procedures with similar labels.

An employee awaiting an uncertain delivery date may lodge a provisional leave notice before medical confirmation arrives.

Route PAR-935 handles an adoption placement case; PAR-953 handles a birth-partner case.

The coordinator records what actually happened, identifies the responsible owner and checks the applicable route. A similarly numbered form is not interchangeable with the recorded form. For a rejected submission, retain the original request and obtain corrected evidence rather than creating a replacement event.

Registry PAR-1036: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry PAR-1047: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry PAR-1058: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry PAR-1069: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Eligibility and operational limits. Select the named cohort and activity before applying a period or amount; different entitlements in this section are not substitutes.

An adoption placement case receives eight paid weeks; a birth-partner case receives two paid weeks.

A confirmed adoption leave request must reach People Operations twenty-one calendar days before its proposed start.

A valid request contains its underlying event date and the scope used for the calculation. Reviewers distinguish acknowledgement, completion and storage periods. A deadline for submitting evidence is not a service restoration promise. If the activity or group is not stated, escalate the question rather than borrowing a nearby rule.

Registry PAR-1080: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry PAR-1091: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry PAR-1102: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry PAR-1113: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Family leave case management - operating guide

CURRENT 2026; effective 1 August 2026

Document control: this 2026 operating guide is CURRENT and effective from 1 August 2026. The 2024 edition is archived and superseded. No forecast for a later year is stated.

The current 2026 family leave case policy approves eight paid weeks for an adoption placement.

Entitlement cases are handled under the family leave policy; evidence storage follows the People records annex.

The reference annex has its own scope. Staff should distinguish operational permission from commercial price, evidence retention and service specifications. Publication of a code or a process owner does not create a missing technical limit or a financial guarantee.

Amendment log: this edition consolidates the current timing rule and ownership path. Historical examples remain in the archive for traceability. They are not exceptions to the current rule. A request citing an older edition must be checked against the effective document before execution.
