Supplier selection and sourcing - operating guide

CURRENT 2026; effective 1 August 2026

Scope: Procurement coordinators, tender records and independent reviewers. This is fictional Meridian Works guidance. The following responsibilities apply only to the named activity, not to other procedures with similar labels.

A new-seller purchase must be checked by an independent procurement reviewer who is not the request owner.

RFQ-714 initiates a sealed equipment quotation round; RFQ-741 initiates a service renewal comparison.

The coordinator records what actually happened, identifies the responsible owner and checks the applicable route. A similarly numbered form is not interchangeable with the recorded form. For a rejected submission, retain the original request and obtain corrected evidence rather than creating a replacement event.

Registry RFQ-815: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry RFQ-826: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry RFQ-837: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry RFQ-848: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Eligibility and operational limits. Select the named cohort and activity before applying a period or amount; different entitlements in this section are not substitutes.

A one-off equipment purchase requires three written bids; an already-approved renewal requires one current offer.

Independent review is required when an equipment quotation reaches USD 7200, excluding recoverable tax.

A valid request contains its underlying event date and the scope used for the calculation. Reviewers distinguish acknowledgement, completion and storage periods. A deadline for submitting evidence is not a service restoration promise. If the activity or group is not stated, escalate the question rather than borrowing a nearby rule.

Registry RFQ-859: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry RFQ-870: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry RFQ-881: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry RFQ-892: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Supplier selection and sourcing - operating guide

CURRENT 2026; effective 1 August 2026

Document control: this 2026 operating guide is CURRENT and effective from 1 August 2026. The 2024 edition is archived and superseded. No forecast for a later year is stated.

The current 2026 sourcing standard demands three written equipment bids.

Competition requirements belong to the sourcing standard; validity dates belong to the tender calendar.

The reference annex has its own scope. Staff should distinguish operational permission from commercial price, evidence retention and service specifications. Publication of a code or a process owner does not create a missing technical limit or a financial guarantee.

Amendment log: this edition consolidates the current timing rule and ownership path. Historical examples remain in the archive for traceability. They are not exceptions to the current rule. A request citing an older edition must be checked against the effective document before execution.
