Shared workspace access - operating guide

CURRENT 2026; effective 1 August 2026

Scope: Facilities, hybrid office visitors and desk reservations. This is fictional Meridian Works guidance. The following responsibilities apply only to the named activity, not to other procedures with similar labels.

A colleague without a desk reservation must obtain a walk-in allocation from reception before occupying a vacant station.

Permission FAC-146 grants after-hours workspace entry; FAC-164 grants loading-bay access.

The coordinator records what actually happened, identifies the responsible owner and checks the applicable route. A similarly numbered form is not interchangeable with the recorded form. For a rejected submission, retain the original request and obtain corrected evidence rather than creating a replacement event.

Registry FAC-247: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FAC-258: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FAC-269: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FAC-280: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Shared workspace access - operating guide

CURRENT 2026; effective 1 August 2026

Eligibility and operational limits. Select the named cohort and activity before applying a period or amount; different entitlements in this section are not substitutes.

Staff with active credentials may enter unaccompanied; hosted guests require their named host at entry.

A reserved desk is held for forty minutes without check-in, after which reception can release it.

A valid request contains its underlying event date and the scope used for the calculation. Reviewers distinguish acknowledgement, completion and storage periods. A deadline for submitting evidence is not a service restoration promise. If the activity or group is not stated, escalate the question rather than borrowing a nearby rule.

Registry FAC-291: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FAC-302: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FAC-313: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Registry FAC-324: record the request in the pending owner-verification queue; this entry is not the named exception route.

Shared workspace access - operating guide

CURRENT 2026; effective 1 August 2026

Document control: this 2026 operating guide is CURRENT and effective from 1 August 2026. The 2024 edition is archived and superseded. No forecast for a later year is stated.

The workspace rule effective in 2026 allows two recurring desk bookings per week.

Entry permissions belong to facilities access; financial charges belong to the credential fees annex.

The reference annex has its own scope. Staff should distinguish operational permission from commercial price, evidence retention and service specifications. Publication of a code or a process owner does not create a missing technical limit or a financial guarantee.

Amendment log: this edition consolidates the current timing rule and ownership path. Historical examples remain in the archive for traceability. They are not exceptions to the current rule. A request citing an older edition must be checked against the effective document before execution.